

Manoa consisted of some forty or fifty men and are supposed to be back of Tantalus. Most of the men are soldiers of the old Household Guards. The officers in command of them were Lot Lane, Lilikoe, John Silva and Pukila, who were afterwards shot and killed by the Sharpshooters in Panoa. Wilcox evinced considerable surprise when apprised of the death of Pukila by the officers. Wilcox believes the remainder of his party are now in the mountains on top of the ridge on the east side of Nuuanu Valley near Konahehau.

Wilcox is suffering from a sore foot, and his hands and wrists are badly scratched, presenting with a rather disheveled appearance. He had not seen or heard of Nowlin since last Monday when he retreated from Manoa.

FOUR LEADERS SURRENDER.

Hiding Within a Stone's Throw of the Waialae Road.

Sam Nowlin, William Greig, Carl Widemann and Louis Marshall, four of the rebel leaders, surrendered themselves yesterday about noon, and later were conveyed safely to the police station. There was nothing sensational about the surrender, not even a shot being fired.

The credit of the capture of the men belongs to Captain Robert Parker, with William A. Kinney a good second. When Parker left town on Saturday his friends were certain that he would accomplish something. They were not disappointed.

The capture of the rebels was made on some information given by William Auld, formerly superintendent of the insane asylum. He and his family were at Niu. Parker and some men left Waialae on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, moving in the direction of Koko Head. They met and questioned Auld, but he claimed he knew nothing of the rebels or their movements. Parker then drove on and toward dusk reached Niu again, on his way to camp. He felt certain that Auld knew something and finally made him admit that a native by the name of Paesina had approached him on Wednesday, stating that he wanted to secure a whaleboat.

This information was enough for the police captain, who hurried to Waialae and telephoned to Deputy-Marshal Brown, who was at Manoa, to arrest Paesina at once.

Yesterday morning about 3 o'clock Marshal Hitchcock and Henry Waterhouse went over to Waialae to see Parker. They were told of the attempt to escape, and given the name of the native, and finally located him and placed him under arrest. He was brought into town.

Of course, he denied any knowledge of the whereabouts of Nowlin and the others. He was not questioned again until 9:30 o'clock, when Chief-Justice Judd and W. A. Kinney took him in charge. He made a firm denial again, but finally, after a great deal of quiet persuasion, he commenced to tell the truth.

He admitted that he went in search of the boat at Nowlin's request. He returned on Wednesday evening about midnight, and reported to Nowlin that he could not secure a whaleboat.

He said that he had been feeding Nowlin all along. Nowlin had told him that he had three others with him. Paesina had not seen them but was of the opinion that they were haoles. His daughter had brought pol, beef and fish to the men.

The man then gave the hiding place of the four rebels. They were hidden in the bushes below Kanewal spring, mauka of Cleghorn's new windmill.

As soon as this statement was made Marshal Hitchcock sent W. A. Kinney and a number of men after the rebels. They reached the place in which the men were hidden but the exact spot could not be located. The native police and others were thrown in a circle to prevent the escape of Nowlin or his companions.

Mr. Kinney then went to Paesina's cottage and found his family. They appeared to realize the serious position they were in while Marshall had an air of bravado about him.

Their camp was discovered yesterday afternoon by Patrolman Nelson and some native police. Two sleeping mats, cups, spoons, sugar and some crackers were found. The camp was located in a dense underbrush, which would only be reached by crawling on hands and knees. It was located but 300 yards from the Waialae road. No arms were found. Nowlin and his companions stated when they surrendered that they threw away their rifles when they went into hiding.

From Paesina's family it was learned that the men slept in their cottage on Monday and Tuesday nights and on Wednesday they made their camp in the brush. They left their followers on Sunday night after they were pursued by the police.

SENIOR CAPTAIN PARKER.

A Brief Sketch of the Man Who Located Nowlin.

The surrender of Nowlin, Greig, Widemann and Marshall was due to Senior Captain Robert Parker. He was present on the memorable Sunday evening at Bertelmann's when the first shot of the rebellion was fired. He was in dangerous quarters for a time, but finally escaped unhurt and took the Kamoiliili road after a number of retreating rebels. He and his men were absent nearly all night and grave fears were entertained for his safety. He finally returned early on Monday morning safe and sound. Since that time he has rendered valuable service to the Government.

On last Saturday afternoon thirty-six policemen were sent out under him and Deputy Marshal Brown. He scoured the mountains and valleys between Manoa and Waialae and reached the latter place on Sunday afternoon. The manner in which Parker was instrumental in locating Nowlin and the three other rebels is narrated elsewhere.

Captain Parker was born in North Kohala on May 15, 1856. He is a cousin of Samuel Parker, formerly a member of the cabinet under the monarchy. He moved to Honolulu in 1881 where he has since remained.

He was first employed by the Government as a luna at the prison. He left the prison later and was made a lieutenant of the household guards and remained as such for seven years.

He tired of military life and then went into the post office and handled letters for seven months. About this time C. B. Wilson, who was the marshal, opened a police station at Waikiki and placed Parker in charge. In August, 1891, he was made a captain and retained that rank until about three months ago, when he was appointed senior captain, a position that ranks next to the deputy-marshal.

The full name of the subject of this sketch is Robert Parker Waipa. His grandfather was John Palmer Parker, a native of Newton, Mass. The latter had three sons and one daughter. The girl married a petty chief of Kona. Robert is their son. Many people attribute the fighting qualities possessed by him to the New England blood in his veins.

This is not the first revolution he has been in by any means. He was in the last Wilcox affair and showed his sterling courage then. He has been an ardent supporter of the present Government since the first day it was established.

Captain Parker is well liked by the men under him and possesses their confidence in a marked degree. He is popular outside of police circles also, and counts among his friends every newspaper writer in town.

Assuming, but is a tower of strength in his modest way.

Captain Parker is a married man and has a large family.

Some Early Shooting.

At ten minutes after 5 o'clock yesterday morning persons living in the vicinity of the Executive building were awakened by the noise of rifle shots. A half-witted negro by the name of Sam was halted at the King street gate and asked to show his pass. He had none, and while the sentinel was calling for the corporal of the guard he made a bold break for liberty. A shot was fired in the air to frighten him, but he kept on his way toward the empty lot at the corner of Queen and Richards street. Two sentinels emptied their rifle chambers at the fleeing man, but no effect was produced. As he approached the corner the sentinel nearest him fired one shot but the negro escaped without being hurt. He was arrested later and locked up.

Punahou's Treat.

The boys of Company B have been treated very well by the Punahou College people. On the first day of their encampment on the hill above the College Captain Wall and Lieutenant Kenae were taken down to dinner. On the second, the sergeants and corporals, together with some of the privates were favored. Since that time the remainder have had a taste of the good things. The baths were put at the disposal of the company. The men have been treated royally, and express great gratitude to those who have been instrumental in giving them pleasure.

NOTES OF THE DAY.

Company B camped near Punahou yesterday.

Company F is still located at the head of Manoa Valley.

Company F was photographed at their headquarters yesterday afternoon.

Everybody was in a happy frame of mind last evening around the police station.

Members of Company F received a good wetting in the mountains Sunday night.

Cecil Brown is still out at Makapuu, and will remain until the remaining rebels are captured.

Captain Parker and a number of police returned from Waialae yesterday. They were in the mountains all Sunday night.

Squad No. 1 desires to thank Mrs. Dole for bountiful lunches and delicious coffee furnished them for several evenings past.

William Auld and his family were sent in from Niu yesterday, by Captain Parker. They had been out there for over a week.

Following were the arrests of Monday: Kaahine, Kaohimau, Kaanaana, John Pio, Pihena, Kahanani, and Ioela Kiakihiki.

"Major" Seward is now wanted badly. It was thought that he was with Nowlin and his crowd, but it seems that he was not.

It was reported last night that Sam Nowlin had made a confession implicating a number of prominent royalists. More arrests will follow.

Lot Lane is the only prominent rebel at large now. He will probably surrender when he hears of the capture of Wilcox, Nowlin and the others.

Mr. Howard, clerk of Punahou College and member of Company B, has the thanks of the men from his company for the kind treatment he has shown them.

There was great excitement yesterday when Nowlin, Greig, Widemann and Marshall, reached the police station. A very large crowd assembled in a moment.

The squad at Makiki wish to thank Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Tenney and others for keeping them supplied with coffee and sandwiches. The kindness of the ladies will be long remembered by the boys.

C. J. Frein has been nominated by Company B to fill one of the vacancies in the Advisory Council. Mr. Frein is quite a favorite in camp, and every one seems to be pleased with the choice.

Louis Marshall, one of the captains under Nowlin, was, until the rebellion broke out, a clerk in the harness shop of W. E. Foster. He formerly belonged to the military, and is considered a crack bicyclist.

Deputy Marshal Brown went through Manoa Valley and rounded up forty-two natives. They are now under police guard. The men who were taken in Palolo Valley on Sunday are still under arrest.

It was reported yesterday that a number of men were seen at Kalihi. Captain Larsen and a posse were sent out and returned last evening after making a thorough search. They saw no traces of any rebels.

Mrs. Aford and her daughters, Mrs. Tracey and Mrs. Henry Waterhouse are very hospitable to the guards on Nuuanu street. The men are very grateful to the ladies mentioned, and all others who looked after their comfort.

The following is a verbatim copy of a notice hanging in the Marshal's office: "Grim visaged war has smoothed his wrinkled front, and all the clouds that lowered about our house are in the deep bosom of the ocean hurried."

When Greig and Marshall were brought in yesterday, one of the guards who was held up in the vicinity of Kakaako on Thursday evening before the outbreak, immediately recognized them as being the parties who committed the deed.

The men of Company F, on guard at Montana's place in Manoa Valley, were very ill yesterday. The ground coffee sent from the city is supposed to be the cause of the sickness. Others on the Montana outfit were affected in the same manner as the guards.

Several shots were heard in the vicinity of Lunalilo Home last night. The manner of firing and the flashing of lights in various houses made it a reasonable supposition that these were signals to the rebels. A squad of sharpshooters was sent to the district.

Speaking of the time of opening the schools and allowing general traffic to proceed, Attorney-General Smith said last night: "We are going to finish the contract we have on our hands before we attempt to do anything else. The people are determined to see this thing finished, and we are going to see it through to the end."

The position of the military last night was as follows: Company F at its usual place in Manoa Valley; Company B at Punahou; Company A back of Lunalilo Home with a squad of sharpshooters on their left; main body of Company C in Nuuanu Valley with a squad back of Punahou; Company E in Panoa Valley; Company D at the Barracks.

A happier lot of men than the native police who came in from the hills would have been hard to find last night. They cleared their throats early in the evening and made the courtyard at the station ring with their songs, starting off with "Home, Sweet Home," and including "After the Ball" and "Marching Through Georgia" in their repertoire.

Robert Wilcox was seen last night while in his cell. He had recovered from the nervousness displayed when captured, and talked freely as he sat drinking a cup of coffee. He said he had not seen Theresa for several days, but hoped to have an opportunity to talk with her today. Nothing regarding the late unpleasantness was mentioned. Wilcox does not, however, appear to regard his position in a very serious light.

would not give any information at first but finally through threats a son was prevailed upon to visit the rebel camp and ask for the surrender of the men. He was instructed to inform them that they would not be harmed and would be conveyed safely to the station house. His mission was successful and at the expiration of ten minutes the four men were seen emerging from the bushes. They were taken in charge and placed in carriages. The ride in town was uneventful.

When the police station was reached the men were kept there for half an hour after which they were taken below.
